Rachel Dolezal, a former N.A.A.C.P. official, whose claim to be black stirred widespread ridicule and outrage. Credit Earl Wilson/The New York Times

What does it mean for someone like Rachel Dolezal, a white civil rights activist, to claim a trans-racial identity? How might such a claim relate to contemporary understandings of transgender identities? Does the blurring of the boundaries between understandings of race and understandings of gender create more harm than good?

PLEASE NOTE the day and time change from when the film series usually meets. Join GRF Ty (tdm76) to view “12 Angry Men.” A jury holds out attempts to prevent a miscarriage of justice by forcing his colleagues to reconsider the evidence. The film is the highest courtroom drama on Rotten Tomatoes’ Top 100 Movies of All Time.
